Randy Nutt - Thinking Is Fun "Thinking is Fun" features abstract pastel drawings by Randy Nutt that explore how human interactions with everyday objects (nature, debris, dreams, light) and immersion in abstract

Originally from Chicago, a founding member of the experimental art rock band Merz Pix, he studied briefly at Tyler School of Art (Philadelphia). More important than formal schooling is his lifelong process of making and studying art, including abstract visual art and abstract compositions on electric bass guitar. Private collectors across the US and the globe (France, the UK, the Netherlands, Tasmania, Japan) have purchased his works. Nutt had a solo exhibit in the Netherlands in the fall of 2015, at the Notre Dame des Arts gallery in Ubbergen. MIAMI BEACH

Special tree to remember special boy

BY EMILY COCHRANE
ecochrane@miamiherald.com

Each bead on the Shema Listening Tree at the Temple Beth Shalom Foundation School is painted with a name and a dream — except for one.

An orange-and-white bead, hanging slightly apart on a dried palm frond, only has a name.

The Calder bead was painted two years ago in memory of Calder Sloan, a former student who was tragically electrocuted while swimming in his family pool just a week after his 7th birthday. On Wednesday morning, 54 new beads, each painted by a pre-kindergartner, were hung on the tree to honor his memory.

“This reflects the fact that we celebrate good times, bad times,” said Margie Zeskind, the school director. “We’re a community and we take care of each other.”

There are pieces of Calder throughout the school — the ceramic self-portrait cemented into a hallway wall with his classmates, the paper leaf he scrawled his name on, a memorial stone installed at the front of the school. But for most of the staff who knew and taught the boy they called “Mr. Awesome,” the tree and its beads are the most important legacies of Calder’s spirit and joy.

“This sacred space is really a space of life honoring Calder’s memory,” Zeskind said. “He lives here daily. His spirit is alive. His memory is alive.”

For the past two years, each pre-kindergartner has painted a bead with their name and their dream job — a teacher, a firefighter, Spider-Man. The beads are strung on palm fronds where parents have written their dreams for their children — to be happy, to have friends, to learn. And at the end of the year, lead teacher Liset Leyva Santalo hangs both from a green spiral in the hallway.

Chris and Carla Sloan initially had approached Zeskind and the school about planting a tree in their son’s memory. Trees are significant both in Judaism and to the school, which was described by a founding rabbi as the “tree that grows on 41st Street.”

But Zeskind couldn’t bear the thought of the tree possibly dying, and spoke to Santalo, who teaches art in the after-school program, about a more permanent memorial.

Santalo said she didn’t know if she could create such a heavy piece. But she was determined to help his family remember their son, and decided to integrate Calder’s memory with a tree project she had already been working on.

“It became so simple, so obvious,” Santalo said. “I almost felt like the tree had been waiting for this bead to come along.”

She initially doesn’t explain to her students why they’re painting the beads or why each bead has splashes of orange, Calder’s favorite color. Instead Santalo waits until the day the beads are displayed to Liset Leyva Santalo, a lead teacher at The Foundation School at Temple Beth Shalom, shows pre-kindergartners the Calder bead on the Shema Listening Tree. The bead honors Calder Sloan, a former student, who was electrocuted while swimming in his pool two years ago.
