Babylon Apartments live on for now; preservation board blocks demolition

BY ANDRES VIGLUCCI
avigliucci@miamiherald.com

Miami's preservation board staved off the impending demolition of the Babylon Apartments, the first building designed by the famed homegrown firm Arquitectonica, unanimously voting to consider designating the structure a protected historic landmark.

The vote Tuesday evening buys time for the Babylon, whose owner got the city to condemn it as an unsafe structure, by imposing a moratorium on issuance of a demolition permit by the city building department. But it doesn't settle the question of the building's survival long term.

Few dispute the architectural originality of the small Brickell apartment building, distinguished by its vivid red, zigurat-shaped face, its key role in shaping the redevelopment of Brickell as an urban residential district in the 1980s, or its role in gaining a worldwide rep for the young Arquitectonica.

But the Babylon, designed in 1979 and completed in 1982, falls short of the normal eligibility standard of 50 years of age for designation. That means the city's preservation office must research if it meets a higher bar of "exceptional importance" for it to be designated.

The board gave city preservation officer Megan Cross Schmitt until July to make that determination amid concerns aired by A. Vicky Leiva, the owner's attorney. Leiva cited a structural analysis that concluded the building was poorly built and badly deteriorated, and could send debris flying into the neighborhood in a tropical storm.

Still, the vote represents a victory for preservationists. Testimony in Tuesday's hearing outlined a last-ditch effort to block demolition just as owner Francisco "Paco" Martinez Celeiro was about to obtain a demolition permit from the city. He has been trying for two years to demolish the five-story building and get the sliver of property it sits on rezoned for a much taller structure. He contends the building's low-scale zoning was an error made during the drafting of the city's Miami 21 code, and persuaded the city planning department to back the upzoning.

But the rezoning proposal stalled after provoking an uproar from neighboring residents, architects and preservationists and opposition from Miami Mayor Tomás Regalado. The city's former planning director and Miami 21's chief consultant both said the low zoning for the Babylon was deliberate.

That imbroglio set the stage for a request on April 5 by historic preservation board member Lynn Lewis, with support of historian Arva Moore Parks, for a report from city staff on whether there could be a case for designation for the Babylon. Parks has called it "truly an iconic building."

That set in motion a 120-day moratorium on demolition a day before Martinez Celeiro was to get a permit to take the building down.

A subsequent report by Schmitt's office concluded that the building deserves further study, but cautioned that several questions need to be addressed. Those include whether it's truly Arquitectonica's first building. Though the Babylon was designed at the same time as the larger Palace condo, the latter was finished first. The report also says more thought needs to be given to how the building fits in with Arquitectonica's early work and the firm's quick rise to fame, and how it compares with other buildings designated before they turned 50.

"Staff is not saying today that this property is eligible for designation," Lewis said at Tuesday's hearing. "I think there is enough there to warrant affording staff additional time to answer the questions it posed."

Leiva said the condemnation by the city's unsafe structures board, which gave Martinez Celeiro a deadline to repair or demolish the building, trumps the preservation board's authority. But assistant city attorney Rafael Suarez-Rivas told the board it could proceed with a designation study.

U.S.-CUBA RELATIONS

Cuban security officials toured Key West drug-war center

BY CAROL ROSENBERG
crosenberg@miamiherald.com

A delegation of Cuban government national security officials recently toured the Pentagon's counter-drug center in Key West — a first, signaling a nascent effort in U.S.-Cuban security cooperation, the admiral in charge of the U.S. Southern Command disclosed Wednesday.

Navy Adm. Kurt Tidd described the effort to crack down on illegal trafficking in the Caribbean as an "area of mutual interest" between the two nations that restored diplomatic relations on July 20, 2015. The Castro government still has not approved the addition of a military attaché to the U.S. Embassy in Havana, he said. So the senior interlocutor there is a Coast Guard liaison.

That officer, Lt. Cmdr. Derek Cromwell, escorted the four-member Cuban security delegation on a familiarization tour of the so-called Joint Interagency Task Force South, or JIATF-South, at the Truman Annex of the U.S. Navy base in Key West on April 21, according to Tidd's spokeswoman, Army Col. Lisa Garcia.

They got a briefing on the work of the multi-agency, multi-national organization that has been described as Southcom's command center in the war on drugs, toured the Joint Operating Center there and met with representatives of 18 different countries assigned there.

The JIATF is essentially a tracking center where different U.S. government intelligence, military and law enforcement agencies — along with representatives of Caribbean, Latin American and European nations — try to help down-range aircraft and vessels intercept or thwart illegal air and sea travel. It started off as a nerve center in the war on drugs but has an expanded mandate to include "illicit trafficking."

Cuban delegate members were identified as Col. Idael Fumero Valdés of the Cuban National Police, part of the Ministry of Interior; Joel Lago Oliva, first secretary of Cuba's Ministry of External Relations; Lt. Col. Hector Gonzalez Hernandez, chief of Cuba's Counterdrug Directorate; and Lt. Col. Imandra Ocegüera Coll, the chief of analysis for the Cuban Border Guard.

The visit signals how much relations between the two nations have changed. U.S. federal agents who cracked a Cuban spy ring in South Florida in the 1990s described two targets of the so-called Cuban Five's Wasp Network as the Southern Command and U.S. Navy operations in Key West, where the military was setting up the anti-drug-trafficking war room.

But in April, the delegation got the official visit to the JIATF, stayed in a local hotel and visited the U.S. Coast Guard in Key West, Garcia said.

Tidd traveled to Havana in August as part of Secretary of State John Kerry's delegation for the flag-raising over the U.S. Embassy. On Wednesday, he discussed the Key West visit with editors and reporters of the Miami Herald.
